
Design brief:

Led by activist Suzanne Verhaar, this grassroots initiative empowers people with migration backgrounds in the Czech Republic to write heartfelt, handmade postcards encouraging Czech citizens to vote.

The postcards aim to bridge divides between locals and migrants by highlighting shared hopes and values, using warm, relatable visuals and personal messages.

The project needs designs that feel personal, collectible, and fridge-worthy, while keeping the focus on a simple, powerful message: You can vote—please do.

Target audiences include both Czech voters and migrant volunteers. The tone is respectful, non-partisan, and gently persuasive.

VOLTE!

VOLTE! is a playful postcard series designed to boost voter turnout by tapping into everyday Czech life. Each illustration links the act of voting with familiar national habits.

Using simple visuals, humour, and emotional cues, the campaign encourages people to see voting not as a chore, but as an extension of what they already value.

The illustrations include fishing, mushroom hunting, drinking beer with friends, and a traditional Czech dish. Using simple line drawings and the colours from the Czech flag that can be easily used on multiple illustrations while still maintaining a visually appealing, cohesive style that will be fun to collect and hang on your fridge.
